9 Die in Heaviest Belfast Fighting

BELFAST, July 14.—Troops and rocket-firing guerrillas battled across wide areas of Belfast last night and today as the British Army rushed in reinforcements. Eight men, among them four soldiers, and one woman were slain in the heaviest fight-ing the city has seen.

In London, the Ministry of Defense announced it was ship-ping urgently to Ulster "a sub-stantial number" of Saracen armored personnel carriers.

After a night and a day in which 5,000 rounds of bullets were fired by Ulster anthorities and guerrillas, according to the army. Britain's Defense Minister, Lord Carrington, said the province was on the brink of "disaster."

Northern Ireland's administrator, William Whitelaw, told the House of Commons that Irish Republican Army gunmen used bazooks-type rocket launchers against troops during an overnight battle in Beliast, caliber weaponry in the Suffolk Housing Development battle. which the army termed the most ferocious of the Ulster campaign. was "a dangerous escalation" of the violence, he said. Army sources said bazooka-type rockets were first used in an attack on a police station here last year. The rockets failed to explode and it was then assumed that the IRA had decided to abandon the weapon. But the sources revealed today that two days ago, during a siege of an army post in the area of the Suffolk Housing Development, on the fringes of the Catholic Andersonstown District, a rocket blew a hole in a wall of the oost. It caused no ensualties. Another rocket was fired at tha dersonstown police station this ek but it bounced off a perimr fence and did not explode. ho widespread shooting last ment and today brought a pre-diction from one army officer that martial law was on the way

"It is more dangerous to walk ene streets at night than ever

Martial law would mean the imposition of a curfew and other measures designed to keep gunmen off the streets. The Suffolk Housing Development was the scene of clashes last Sunday between Catholic crowds and the British Army that the IRA cited in announcing the end of its 13-day truce.

The battle overnight was touched off when the army, abandoning its "low profile" efforts against the IRA, sent 600 troops into the housing development to seize it from IRA gunmen who had been sniping from it for four days. Two soldiers and three elvilians, who were believed to be IRA members, were killed in the fighting.

The troops were in control of the sevelopment today. The army claimed to have hit 28 gunmen during the night and the IRA's militant Provisional wing was apparently furious at being caught unawares by the army's massive operation.

A spokesman for the Provisionals issued a statement today saying: "We are going to take heavy reprisals for what has happened. We are going to be indiscriminate now." At the height of the battle, the IRA issued a radio call for all Provisional units to report for action. But the troops held the upper hand.

In Londonderry, three bombs shook the already heavily damaged downtown shopping area but caused no casualties. One turned a shop into a blazing inferno with flames chooting bombs was said to have been smuggled into the city center in a baby carriage.

Trade wired British Prime Min-ister Edward Ecath, appealing for troop reinforcements. The army dispatched 600 more men from Across the border in the Irish Republic. Protestant families from the village of St. Johnston left their homes after a second night of sectarian riots. A Protestant-owned store and a Masonic hall were burned down and a gasoline bomb was thrown into a Protestant church hall. About 15 percent of the area's population is Protestant; compared with the 5 percent throughout the overwhelmingly Catholic republic. The Belfast Telegraph com-mented editorially "on alarming signs that British public opinion growing more impatient with

Lynch Charges IRA Seeks A 'Full-Scale War' in North

DUBLIN, July 14 (AP).—Premier Jack Lynch charged today that the IRA is "coldly, calculatiogly and deliberately" trying to drive Northern Ireland "into full-scale civil war." In one of his strongest statements to the Dell (parliament), he rejected the claim of the IRA that it was carrying forward the 1916-1921 battle for independence. That claim, he said, was "a pathy from anybody in the republic." Mr. Lynch spoke at the end of a two-day debate on the bloody battles in Ulster that have claimed at least 12 lives in the past

His government, he said, is now ready to sit down at a conference table with representatives of the British government and of Ulster's Protestant and Catholic communities. But, he warned, the minority Catholics will no longer accept government by the Protestant majority alone and "this cannot be reimposed in this situation."

In 1968, Robert Kennedy was assassinated like his hrother, and it was Stephen Smith, a brotherin-law, who came to Chicago to wheel and deal in the Standard Innet Club downtown while "draft- lung Teddy" rumors and plots floated through the chaotic conven-tion hall until they were finally stilled.

Even before he flew to Florida last night, Edward Kennedy had played a major role in this convention. Many of the anti-Mc-Govern liberals clung to the last to the hope that a deadlock would prompt a draft. Rep. Wilbur D. Mills of Arkansas and his agents fanned those embers all through the week.

When the nomination of Sen. McGovern became official Wednesday night, he made one final attempt to persuade Sen, Kennedy to accept the vice-presidential nomination. Having failed, the South Dakotan and his advisers still hope that Sen. Kennedy will somehow be ehic to close the ruptures between the nomineo and organized labor and, perhaps more important, between the nominee and Mayor Daley.

be a poor boys' army," he said in a Senate speech last summer. "I believe that America is not only the land of opportunity but also the land of obligation. One of these obligations is to bear arms in time of war-even a foolish one."

Sen. Engleton was also moving with unusual speed for a freshman senator on a broad range of Senate business. He became an advocate of full federal funding of welfare, for example, and in alliance with Sen. Robert Dole, the Republican national chairman, proposed a reform of the presidential election process-a novel plan that would give victory to the winner of the popular vote but only if he carried more than half the states, or states with more than half the national total of voters.

He is regarded as a more assertive legislator, and a keener student of power within the Senate, than his running mate. "He's more liberal than Mc-Govern," said a Senate insider. "I would think he would be prepared to go beyond McGovem on most social programs,

He expressed con-fidence that ha had merely begun to tap a political ferment comparable to that sat loose by Presidents Jefferson, Jackson and Roosevolt.

Democratic Rivals He paid respect also to his Democratic rivals this year, including Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama, hut he avoided any mention of his party's last two Presidents-John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson.

Indeed, he blamed their administrations, and those of Presidents Dwight D. Eisenhower and Mr. Nixon, for charting "a terrible war" behind closed doors. The war had spawned his candidacy and also his "public plan" to end it—starting with an end of the bombing in Indochina on Inauguration Day.

But he would move far beyond that concern, Sen. McGovern said. He insisted that he would never let America hecome "a second-rate nation," but he argued that resources must be liberated for other works, because national security also includes education and medical care and safe streets and the protection of the environment.

His administration, he predict-ed, would do whatever it takes to put the jobless back to work, to support those unable to work, to introduce national health insurance and to reform the tax system, Resentments against the convention's choice and fears of a big defeat in November were still being voiced around this convention city. But Sen, McGovern appeared confident of overcoming them in time and he used the vice-presidential nomination in the effort.

He went once more through the routine of offering the position to Sen. Kennedy, but received the expected refusal. He then turned to long lists of names gathered hy himself and his staff in recent days-lists that bore the preferences and priorities of leading party officials and officeholders and which stressed various considerations, such as the choice of a Catholic, or a Southerner, or a non-political figure or someone to appease the offended leaders, of the blg

Sen. Eagleton, like Sen. Mc-Govern, is a liheral with roots and demonstrated appeal in a conservative state. And he is known as a pragmatic political operator whereas the presidential candidate has of late emphasized his principles and idealism.

Whereas, Sen. McGovern has offended big labor by ignoring it too often, Sen. Eagleton has given the unions what they deemed to be a perfect Senate voting record until he strayed last year hy opposing the supersonic transport plane and the Lockheed loan. Sen. And he passed the seid test of early and fervent opposition to the war that the South Dakotan set for all the men under consideration today.

Lack of Enthusiasm Sen. Eagleton's name was formally placed before the convention during a tedious round of brief speeches and the modest response from the floor reflected the lack of enthusiasm of many of the delegates who had hardly heard of the junior senator from Indeed, the episode, followed by the selection, was reminiscent of how another freshman senator was nominated for the vice-presidency 20 years ago. His name was Richard M. And the Democrats today, as the Republicans did in 1952, have a candidate who needed to go out of his way to demonstrate that a political service from an established politician would not go unheeded or unrewarded.

The desire for a Catholic running mate was plainly a major consideration for the McGovern forces, Catholic voters have been restive for many years in the once traditional home of the Democratic party and the threats of even greater defection among them have shown up markedly in polls taken by Sen. McGovern and others.

Fischer's request for a reversal of Schmid's ruling was heard by a four-man appeal board composed of assistant referee Gudmundur Arniaugsson, of Iceland, Icelandic federation member Baldur Moller, Nikolal Krogius, a Spassky side, and Cramer. As he waited in an antercom

Looking for Money

Meanwhile, many of the convention protesters passed up the last night of demonstrations yesterday to concentrate on panhandling enough money for food and the trip home.

Only about 600 demonstrators remained in the camp site at Flamingo Park. Throughout the day, protesters packed their tents and bedrolls and drifted away. As delegates began arriving at Convention Hall for the last session, about 100 members of tha Vietnam Veterans Against the War marched from Flamingo Park to the hall

The young activists, most of whom were dressed in fatigue uniforms, marched with upraised fists and chanted "Ering our hrothers home." Motorcycle patrolmen preceded and followed the marchers as they assembled on the Convention Hall lawn.

Free Meals Distributed

At Flamingo Park, many of the protesters who remained were grouped around two tents where members of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference and the Hare Krishna religious sect distributed free meals. A group of about 200 · Yippies and Zippies later marched from the park to the front of Convention Hall, where they burned a huge photograph of former President Lyndon B. Johnson, Members of the groups also pledged to return to Miami Beach to protest at the Republican National Convention.

The other was Mrs. Dorotha Weitz, who was removed when the government exercised the first of its six "peremptory" challenges -challenges without stated reason. She had said that the United States "shouldn't be involved" in Vietnam.

The defense removed three prospective jurors with challenges. One, a young Oklahoma native named Homer R. Walls, had said that he was "for the war" and called for "victory."

Another, an aircraft worker named Richard M. Grunenwals, had said that the United States should not be in Vietnam but should get out "as best we can, not as losers." He also had a secret security clearance, which the defense asserted might color his attitude toward the defendants' alleged release of the classified papers.

The defense falled in an attempt to challenge "for cause" nine prospective jurors because they or members of their families had held security clearances. Judge Byrne rejected the defense arguments that they might fear the loss of clearances for employment if they sided against the government.

Pioneer-10 Begins Risky Path Through Wide Asteroid Belt

By John Noble Wilford

NEW YORK, July 14 (NYT).--The Pioneer-10 spacecraft, bound for Juniter, begins this weekend the most hazardous part of its flight, a seven-month passage through the dusty, rocky debris of the asteroid belt. Never before has a spacecraft penetrated this vast region be-tween Mars and Jupiter, which is largely uncharted and perbaps hest known as the fictional realm of Saint-Exupery's Little Prince. The 175-million-mile-wide beit contains more than 50,000 objects wider than a mile, all hurtling at speeds of 12 miles a second.

And there are assumed to be hillions of other rocky fragments. many no bigger than a grain of sand or a fleck of dust.

Project officials at the space agency's Ames Research Center, in Mountain View, Calif., estimate that Pioneer-10's closest approach to any of the known asteroids would be 5.5 million miles. That is the distance at which it will pass the asteroid Palomar-Leydon (six-tenths of a mile wide) on Aug. 2 and asteroid Nike (15 miles wide) on Dec. 2.

But it would take a particle only one-fiftieth of an inch in diameter to damage Pioneer-10 seriously, the official said. The likelihood of such an impact, they said, is about one chance in 10.

If the unmanned, 550-pound spacecraft emerges unscathed, it should reach the vicinity of Ju-piter in December, 1973, for the first close-up observations of the solar system's largest planet. The spacecraft was launched on its 620-million-mile journey from Cape Kennedy on March 2 and is now 115 million miles from earth.

The children were all in the water when a teacher get into difficulties. A colleague rushed to his aid, but was soon also struggling against powerful cur-rents. The children linked hands to form a chain to reach the two men, but the seas dashed them apart and swept the four girls out into the ocean. The two teachers were reported unharmed.

Defining George McGovern

If the past year should have taught us anything about the political condition of this country, it is that the old definitions will not do-and especially will they not do to analyze or describe the successful candidacy of Sen. George McGovern, who won his party's nomination for President Wednesday night. Orthodoxy would require, for example, that Sen. McGovern now be urged to "move to the center." Yet it seems to us that one thing Sen. McGovetn's preconvention campaign has amply demonstrated is that the American voter has rendered obsolete the familiar conception of where the center lies, that too many issues and attitudes now defy the old left-right schematic distinctions to make possible some ready location of a "center" midpoint between them. Similarly, we would suggest that nothing is more likely to lead to an intellectual deed end than the current effort to measure Sen. McGovern in terms of the degree of his "radicalism." Sen. Mc-Govern, after all, has scarcely proposed anything more "radical" than some of Richard Nixon'e larger policy departures in officefrom the overturning of 30 years of China policy to the espousal of a guaranteed annual income. So we would argue that the relevant question about Sen. McGovern's views is not whether they are "centrist" or "radical," but whether they are foolish or

That Sen. McGovern's emphasis in the preconvention campaign reflected a preoccupation with legitimate new issues that are properly coming to the center of national concern seems indisputable to us: the inequities of the way in which we as a nation tax and redistribute our income; the skewed priorities and outworn assumptions that have led us into so costly and disastrous a war as Vietnam and which are reflected in our outsized and nigh uncontrollable military expenditures; the fundamental crisis in confidence the American people are experiencing in relation to the institutions that so profoundly affect their lives, Where Sen. McGovern has set forth specific programs to counter these ills or permitted himself to talk freely about less specific plans, we believe that he has endorsed or at least identified himself with a number of questionable propositions. There are elements of both his defense spending plan and his earlier tax and income redistribution echeme which corely require revision. These, together with certain aspects of his prospective program for ending U.S. involvement in the war while assuring the return of our prisoners, are among the major subjects on which we expect there will be not just debate but also response from the candidate as the campaign wears on.

it would be another miscalculation of the man and the meaning of his nomination to attribute those more controversial or even offensive parts of his program to his presomed leadership of some well-organized failing either to reconcile disaffected eleand extreme (or "radical" or "left-wing") faction within the Democratic party. For one thing that does seem certain at this point is that Sen. McGovern in fact reflects and represents a very powerful current of thought and bent of mind within the party on his approach to the major issues and his definition of them.

The fact helps account, we think, for the extraordinary atmosphere of the Miami Beach convention, a potentially explosive gathering that turned ont to be marked instead by a strange quality of easy patience and even bonhomie. This, of course, was due in large part to the actions of othersthe good sense of Lawrence F. O'Brien, who conducted the convention brilliantly, the good fellowship of Hubert Humphrey, who got out when his candidacy could only be continued at the expense of the party and its nominee. But there was something larger at work, we believe, in Miami Beach among the Democrats, something closely connected with the McGovern candidacy and something that strongly affected the tone of the proceedings. It was an elusive but real eense among the participants of reunion and even liberation-liberation from the nightmare of Chicago and from the closeddoor, stale-air evasion and dissembling that led to it. It was a sense that the party might just be on the verge of re-establishing its identity and continuity and making peace with itself.

That observation will seem to many wise heads preposterous at the very least, coming as it does on the heels of unprecedented iabor leadership disaffection, a drastic reduction in the prospect that the Southern element of the old coalition can be retrieved and the dramatic refusal of the convention to eeat the delegation of the last of the party's great city machine politicians. Richard Daley. Nor would we argue that the absence of physical violence or disturbance should be confused with an absence of profound disagreement in the party of many important party members with the ideology and the constituency that prevailed. What we would observe is that Sen. McGovern. both in his manner of winning this nomination and his thematic emphasis, may have helped make the party able once again to live with itself. For the theme we have in mind, that which animates the platform ae it did chairman O'Brien'e opening remarks and as it has Sen. McGovern'e campaign, is one which accepts responsibility for what has gone wrong, which makes that the basis not just of new policy but also of a party continuity of a very peculiar but genuine

Let us come out in the open and see who is strongest and let everyone play by the rules, the convention seemed to say. Let us concede that much of what has gone so wrong has been our own work. That is the only way in which we can even affirm the rather basic fact of who we are-not to mention the only way in which we can pick up the pieces and figure out where to go.

The Democratic convention and its nominees-Sen, McGovern and Sen, Thomas Eagleton-may well turn out to represent But our own preliminary judgment is that a ticket that is wrong on substantial points of program or that is politically and/or ideologically unequal to the elective test. It could prove inadequate to the challenge of mobilizing a majority Democratic vote by ments of the party or to compensate for their loss. But the extraordinary process of procedural reform and identification of the issues that appear to he moving the electorate somehow contrived in the convention to create a situation in which one felt the Democrats were beginning their 1972 campaign in the only way they could-if they were to have a fighting chance. For that they owe much to their candidate.

THE WASHINGTON POST.

McGovern Begins

In his choice of Sen. Thomas Eagleton of choosing a man with clear liberal convictions Missouri as his vice-presidential running mate as well as in his acceptance speech, Sen. George McGovern has demonstrated that he can reach out for fresh political strength without sacrifice of principle.

Sen. Eagleton was refreshingly candid in setting forth the reasons why he was tapped. He is relatively young, a Roman Catholic from an urban state, and has good relations with organized labor. These qualities complement those of Sen. McGovern. a Protestant from a rural state who is distrusted by the hierarchy of the AFL-CIO for his political unorthodoxy and his rejection of George Meany'e rigidly ritualistic anti-Communism in foreign policy. Since Sen, Eagleton was an original Muskie man, his nomination is a friendly gesture to those who hacked the Maine senator's unsuccessful candidacy. He is also a party regular well-regarded by the rather conservative Missouri organization. That makes him a reassuring figure to many other party regulars who feel less doubt of the "New Politics" which unexpectedly swept Sen. McGovern to victory.

In addition to all these politically conventional but not intellectually compelling considerations, there are positive reasons for welcoming Sen. Eagleton's nomination. In compatible with his own, Sen McGovern has avoided presenting the electorate with the kind of schizold ticket which political managers so often concoct in the name of party harmony.

Having served as district attorney, state attorney general and lieutenant governor, Sen. Eagleton has had useful experience in local and state government. Although relatively new to the national scene, he has already shown himself an intelligent, conscientious and compassionate legislator. His performance in the thankless work of the District of Columbia Committee has been notably praiseworthy.

There is no perfect prescription for a candidate for the awkward and anomalous office of vice-president and no ideal way to select him. Yet surely a method could be devised to bring the rank-and-file delegates more fully into the eelection process. The submission by the presidential nominee of three or four acceptable names, instead of just one, would be a possible improvement

Sen. McGovern is clearly off to a good beginning in what promises to be a difficult and hard-fought campaign in which the nation will be asked to make fundamental judgments about its future.

BELFAST.-Perhaps not since the troubles of the 1920s has Northern Ireland feced a graver crisis. The rupture of the ceasefire by the Irish Republican Army's militant Provisional wing, the erection of barricades again in Roman Cetholic and Protestant neighborhoods, the talk of civil wer, the armed militias on both sides, the chain of unsolved sectarian murders, the intimidation of Catholic families in mixed reighborhoods —all have shrouded Northern Ireland in darkness once again.

The nightmare seems unending. Why? Why do both sides seem so reconciled to simost yearning for-a fight? Why does nothing seem to work? In a province obsessed with 17th-century religious disputes. in neighborhoods stained with tribal distrust, in homes where political, religious and cultural values have become totally distorted, the quest for the elusive peace between Catholics and Protestants does, indeed, seem remote.

The guilt rests with both communities. The gulf between them, at this point, seems more historic, more hysterical and simply more irrecondiable than that between Arabs and Jews, Indians and

The Imbulance

For one, both sides see themselves as besieged and threaten-ed. Of the 1.5 million people here two-thirds are Protestant, but in the wider context of Ireland they are outnumbered three to one.
"The inevitable result has been the disastrous advent of a ruling establishment with the reins of power irremovably in its hands but acting under the stresses of a besieged minority," said a re-cent report by the Minority Rights tion that conducted a study in Northern Ireland. This has dwarfed economic, political and social advances, made them suspicious of most British politicians seeking a settlement and made them hostile to the Catholic

Beyond this Northern Ireland remains one of the few lands where politics is stratified along religious rather than class lines. Protestant workers, however impoverished, zealously support the Unionist party, the local Conservatives, which dominated the government for 51 years and which views the border as the crucial issue.

Thus no Labor movement in Northern Ireland has succeeded in gaining Protestant working-class support. One of Ulster's tragedies is the failure of workers, Protestant and Catholic, unite for better conditions. (In Beliast about 40 percent of the homes are without bathfooms or inside tolletal

A Tale of 2 Parties-Both the Democratic

By David S. Broder

MIAMI BEACH—It's now clear there are two Democratic parties coming out of this convention and preparing for the fall campaign.

One is the McGovern party that captured the presidential nomination and at least temporary possession of the symbols of Democratic legitimacy.

The other party, which lacks a name, is made up of elected officials particularly governors, congressmen, union leaders and some of the big contributors, who failed to block Ser. George McGovern's nomination.

The McGovern party accepted its victory at Convention Hall Thursday night, and on Friday took formal command of the Democratic National Committee and is set to begin its campaign

Members of the Anti-McGovern coalition accepted defeat early Tuesday morning on the Callfornia credentials roll-call, and just 12 hours later held its first meeting to plan its return to power. Their blueprint: Pool resources this fall for an all-out effort to preserve the Democratic majorities in Congress, and then use Congress and the governorships to regain control of the national party etructure from Mc-Govern, after what they regard as his inevitable November defeat. There's nothing new in Democratic politics about a split between the party'e "presidential" and "congressional" wings. For years, the House and Senate Democrats have maintained their own campaign committees, raised their own funds and stoutly resisted efforts from "downtown" to centralize the party authority in the hands of a President or a presidential candidate.

A Difference

The difference now is that the etrongest single element in or-ganized labor—the AFL-CIO and its Committee on Political Education-has cut its ties with the "presidential" party and is taking the lead in organizing a broadened coalition of non-presidential Democrats.

That's never happened before, because for two generations Big Labor has been able to exercise veto power over the choice of the Democratic presidential and vice-mesidential nominees.

This year, McGovern overrode Big Labor's veto—and George Meany and his allies are furious. They're not the only ones, of course. The backers of Hubert Humphrey; most of the big city, Border State and Southern Democrats in Congress; et least twothirds of the Democratic gov-ernors, and a sizable bloc of the party'e biggest fund-raisers also woke up with a feeling they'd been robbed of control of their party by the McGovern forces. At a Tuesday loncheon, arranged by Meany's lieutenants, they the interests of the congression campaign and eventual recapt:

Labor has shown it can call its debts from those it has help. But labor was not able exercise similar influence in t convention-in part, because t McGovern commission reform had reduced the number of offiholder-delegates and increas the number of "citizen-typ" with no obligations to the un

If Meany is willing to take th risk, there were indications th some of his top state lieotenar were not. top of the ticket," he said. In another interview, United Auto Workers president Leonard Woodcock sald he was hopeful several of the big AFL-CIO affiiintes would back McGovern, even if the federation did not.

These comments presaged a battle inside labor. But as of Priday, Meany's disposition is to put the manpower, political ma-chine and resources he commands at the disposal of Democratic congressional and gubernatorial candidates, instead of George McGovern

And it's also clear that if Mc Govern loses in November, there will be a battle-royal for control of the Democretic party that will make the convention fight seem

MIAMI BEACH—Even George McGovern'e people say frankly that he can be given no more than an outsider's chance of defeating the incumbent President. But it is important to distinguish that kind of realism from the orotund funeral orations for the Damocratic party that some old political hands commentators have been delivering here in Miami.

"Self-destruct" is the favorite head-shaking phrase of these critics. The McGovern supporters, they say, are zealots de-stroying the party by their refusal to compromise or deal with the established Democrats.

Symbols of Policy

And so one might conclude that a good deal of wounded ego is involved in the criticism—the bitterness of men whose advice was successfully ignored and who fear the loss of familiar access to power. But there is more to it than thet. There is a genuine difference of view about the poliand houses but look to unity as the solution. They accept and often condone IRA violence and

The only real organizational potential for the Democrats now what McGovern has so brilliantly enlisted: the children of the professional middle class and the minorities. Like it or not, there is no other army of door-bell-ringers available.

That mass of volunteers is essential, in the McGovern view of politics, because he believes Americans are lonesome because they yearn for human contact. One of his strategists, 27-yearold Richard Stearns, puts It:

And the handful of African cities (17, to be exact) that Swissair serves can't obscure the fact that the competing airline with the most destinations in Africa flies to a few cities more.

Not to mention the Far East, to which Swissair flies but once a day. (Even the exclusive non-stop flights between Geneva and Bombay and between Athens and Bangkok hardly make up for this.)

After last year's Rhode Island brouhaha, producer Weln was down for the count of nine. He has not only arisen trlumphantly but by his move to New York has worked incalculable benefits for the image of the music, as well as for the city Itself.

Edward Kennedy Ellington was oroclaimed official host of Fun City's summer festival. John Birks Gillespie received the lasting and most ambitious un- Handel Medallion, the city's etage. The fools on the hill who dertaking in the 70-year history highest cultural award, in a ceredestroyed Newport in 1971 were mony with Meyor John V. Lind-Jumping the gun on Wein, 52 y. CTI Records staged a concert tha night before Newport began, with Esther Philips, Johnny Hammond and 10 others attracting a capacity crowd to Madison Square Garden.

Eveo for the dissident musicians who thought the whole thing a shuck because they hadn't been invited, the festival was a boon. They staged their own 10-day rump "New York Musicians Jazz Festival" at a dozeo spots in Harlem and Greenwich

The music flowed out into the etreets. Seventh Avenue was closed to vehicles for 10 blocks as a Sunday community cultural fair wae staged with Newport supplying the jazz.

Adding all these facts together, you begin to draw an exhilarating conclusion: Eveo where the hardest-headed policymakers are at the controls. the word jazz is taking on a profitable rather than a pajorative connotation. It is noted that while the number of young jazz fane grows, conversely there is no conspicuous upsurge in the statistics for 50 or 60-yearold rock fans.

Concert promoters now see more clearly the contrast hetween a jazz and a rock audience. Wa have all seep or heard about the vandalized auditoriums in rock concert aftermaths: the velvet chaire slashed with knives, tha wine splashed against walle, the wrecked furniture. During its nine days, Newport covered the town from Carnegie to Philharmonic Hall, from Radio City to Yankee Stadium, and the gravest incideot reported was a mustard stain when somebody dropped his hot dog.

The essential difference lies in motivations. People simply do not turn to Oscar Peterson for music to freak out by; they never OD to Cannonball or McCann or Monk nor do they expect B. B. King to smash his guitar for a finale while they invade the Enex has every performe. Discounts up to 35% on bags, Ues, leweiry... a non-jazz minority with no place else to go.

In New York, using mainly in-door locations, Wein had total control of a better, friendlier acene. True, the picnic ambience of Newport was missed, but look at the compensations. Here was a sumptuous artistic spread for an immediately accessible urban audience: I saw infants in arms, children, longhaira and graybeards, blacks and whites, all in greatly varying proportions according to the menu.

Of all the good times, I recall most fondly the hoatride up the Hudson on the Fourth of July. We took off on the Staten Island Ferry, a 285-foot boat called the John F. Kennedy making its maiden run. The music was geared to the traditions of jazz's riverboat origins, with the Tuxedo and Preservation Hall Bands, both from New Orleans. They were marvelous to watch, these gnarled men revisiting a fading past; but ironically, tha freshest New Orleans music aboard was supplied by a cornetist from Denmark, Papa Bue, whose Viking Jazz Band translated the idiom of the Bayou with remarkable anthentic-

Nowhere was the friendly giveand-take among musicians, or between jazzman and listener, more rewardingly displayed than at Radio City Music Hall. Both midnight jam sessions were filled to the 6,200-seat capacity.

The first session began with a collection of swing veterans: Roy Eldridge, Vic Dickenson, Benny Carter, Bud Freeman, Red Norvo, Bohby Hackett, Teddy Wilson, and a couple of younger interlopers, With old pros like that there was no procedural trouble; each man took two choruses, with Eldridge working up enough steam to get the crowd truly involved. Then came a big, sentimental hand for Gene Krupa as he took over from Bohby Roeengarden at the drums, Kids for whom Krupa is a name on a TV rerun whistled and stomped for this glimpse into a world their fathers had told them

For the second set Wein fielded men of the hop generation: Dizzy Gillespie, Milt Jackson, Stan Getz. Benny Green. Also the timeless, serene-faced Mary Lou Williams at the piano. The sounds of Miles Davis, who walked out on were now more complex, and PA very abort notice ("Maybe we'll problems upset the delicate halget him some other year"), and ance-still the enthusiasm was identical to that accorded the a hurricane.

Roland Kirk . . . tomorrow's sounds

Logically, the modernists jammed last. Herbie Hancock, Tony Williams and Roland Kirk celebrated tha sound of tomorrow on a stage that had never in its 40 years accommodated this music in any form. Years from now New Yorkers will be talking about the night jazz took over the music

More than any other individual, Gillespie was the symbol of all that is healthy in the creation and dissemination of jazz. He played with staggering virtuosity in every setting assigned himwith the all-star giants of jazz, with his own combo, with the 100 youngsters of the choir, and at the jam session. He took his music seriously enough to afford to lace the edges with humor, introducing his white planist and guitarist as "a native of the Congo" and "a native of Nigeria" before announcing his black drummer and hassist as natives of Dublin and Stockholm, Underlying the comedy was an implication: "This is where it's at, man; we're all soul brothers."

As for Wein, I share the mustcians' respect for this man who worked a logistic and musical miracle, with a staff of just a half dozen helpers, juggling 600 musicians at 45 performances, dealing cooliy with the behavior get him some other year"), and generally acting like the eye of C Los Angeles Times

EMILY GENAUER

Footnotes to Europe's Museums

NEW YORK—Herewith footnotes on a European holiday. And I mean footnotes, random jottings made during miles of hiking through museums reaching from Norway to Italy.

Norway first, then, because it's where I started, being a Norway nut. I love that country, and most especially Oslo, because it's one of the few cities I know sophisticated enough to afford the amenities of a capital, but small enough so the woods and the ses seem at the end of every street. Two special targets for me this trip. One was the Sonja Henis Museum, more correctly titled the Henis-Onstad Foundation.

I remember hearing, in the old days, when Henie was ice-skating champion of the world (10 world championships, three Olympic championships, and I don't know what else), that she was also seriously interested in contemporary art. Her husband, Niels Onstad, a shipbuilder, was a major collector. Together they built a museum and cultural center for Oslo, its architecture by two young men who won out over 90 other contestants in an international competition (they had never done a museum before). The huilding was completed shortly before Miss Henie's death three years ago.

The building sits on a promontory of the Oslo Fjord, facing an anchorage crowded with sail-boats. It has five separate pavilions fanning out as cards in a player's hands.

The Difficulty

The difficulty, however, is that the beautiful notion of flowing, flexible space provides very little room, actually, for the display of art. So much is made available for a mixed-media theater, spacious walkways, cafeterias, sitting spaces, that the permanent collection has to be almost entirely shoved out of sight to make room for guest shows. And that's a pity. What the museum remains, then, is a laboratory for new lighting techniques, new huilding materials, new devices for the circulation of crowds-in a word, a playground for architects. It is only a sometime background for some stunning examples of works by Dubuffet, Klee, Miro, Gris, Munch, Picasso, Max Ernst, Villon, Tamayo -most of which I saw in the storerooms.

The temporary exhibition filling most of the available space at the time of my visit was given to what the Norwegians call Viking art but should, more correctly, he called Norwegian medieval art. This being the 1,100th anniversary of the Kingdom of Norway, several such exhibitions are being held, chief among them—my second Norwegian target-in the Oslo Historical Museum.

This one is special in that everything it contains comes from collections abroad. The Norwegians are very pleased with this assembled evidence that they are not alone in their admiration of the incredibly delicate and complex carving, combined with great, sweeping, rhythmic, overall shapes, that are best exemplified by the majestic Viking ships preserved in a special museum just outside of Oslo.

The whole question, highly pertinent at this time of enormously increasing public interest and forever shrinking funds, of how a museum should serve, and whom, was strikingly dramatized for me at Louisiana, a museum a three-quarter-hour train ride outside Copenhagen. Louisiana is the and oneness of creativity.

name of a heautiful country house on a gre estate bordering the seaside. Forget the sea, at it is Joseph Hirshhorn's house and grounds. Greenwich, Conn., or the Wurzburger collecte in Baltimore, or several others about the Take States. The interior and grounds are filled by but guess anyone, you can't miss. Here a Re-Moore (or maybe six or seven), there a Brane Here a Giscometti, there an Arp. Calder, of conin both mobiles and stabiles. Ipoustingly, the tainly. Pomodoro, Marini, Nevelson, the who stylish roster of sculptors. And incide are picture. by Francis Bacon, Max Ernst, Picasso, Braque, Gr Ensor, Dubuffet, Warhol, Indiana, De Koon Pollock, etc., etc., etc.

Question: Must all museums be exactly to same, own works by precisely the same arts those who have made it on the internation circuit?

I suppose the answer has to be yes, and we not? What is good enough for New York is por enough for Copenhagen, Oslo, wherever, we shouldn't victors to a country museum cuts Copenhagen see splendid examples of works the artists generally acclaimed by the Art Engl lishment to be the best anywhere? Museums not built for globe-trotters like me, who we on seeing the same thing.

And yet . . Are we absolutely certain the are the only good ones? I could draw up a ? of another 50 or even 100 artists no less and plished. Must there be Henry Moores by dozen, good as he is? Could the explanation not that museum directors buy the same were because they are The Best, but because, ben so highly publicized, they are the safest inye ments, the ones that will make their institute as important as some others, and the ones done and benefactors will most readily agree to bus Should I maybe just stay home, so I det grow irritated by the sameness, the me-too-is of the museum world?

But no. I saw a museum in Verena a comb of weeks ago whose impact and image will six: with me aways. What it contained was the usual. Usual, indeed! Usual, that is, for a museum in Italy, which is to say it contained fantastically fine works by Mantegna, Veronese, Tilian, Time retto, Carpaccio, Centile and Olovanni Bellini Guardi. No point in cataloguing them all again What was so marvelously satisfying bere was that the museum, located inside the 14th-century Castelvecchio, is the most modern, imaginative structure Tve seen anywhere. Its exhibition arms for one thing, might be described as being scale tured out of space. Its statresses are themselves works of sculpture. Connecting the galleries in bridges overlooking the castle keep. The wind structure is like something Marcel Breuer mas have meant for his Whitney Museum to be, being it came out looking like a monstrous cross between a sitting duck and a fortress.

. But the exhibition techniques themselves rate exciting. Fragments of ancient frescoes displayed on modern steel frames. Easels of iron. Picture on ingenious swinging frames one can turn in

In some mysterious way the architects have desiin this museum of old masters precisely where every museum exists to do-make a congresse between old and new, stressing

Carmen, Typical is the confrontation between the hero Joe and the two women in his life, Carmen and Michelle. For what should be a tense climax tha three singers sit in chairs lined-up facing the audience.

Mr. Hendler has a banal way himself, attractively played by David Warner. The politics are breathtaking in their unashained with lyrics. His words to Bizet's habaners go: "You had to touch, you had to grab ever since I was son) poisons her husband. Au-12 year old; too much touch and gustus, as well as her children and Claudius's intended wife, in too much grab/when you get the pursuit of power. warm that leaves me cold."

Carmen here is transformed into an American college girl, a campus rebel-"not a radical," as the program is quick to point out, since this is a middle-aged attempt at a youth musical and designed not to npset anyone. Don Jose has become Joe, a campus, policeman; Escamillo, instead of a bullfighter, is a rock

Mr. Hendler has somehow managed to lose any sense of drama or narrative, and has not even a consistent attitude to life that saved "Hair" the need of a story line. There is no interaction between the characters, so that the musical is reduced to an evening of 32 separate numbers with some not to say chutspah; to make a rudimentary dancing. Even at rock musical of "Carmen" and this level, due to the dull lyrics and ordinary melodies that Mr. Hughes has added, the evening

THE ART MARKET

The Super-Auctions: Satisfactions, Perils

By Souren Melikian

ONDON, July 14 (IRT).-Serious collectors used to avoid buying at big auctions with flashy catalogues and glamorous names attached to the objects for sale. They knew that they wouldn't be paying just for the work of art but also for prestige and atmosphere. The unfortunate thing about atmosphere is that you can't put it on your walls when you get home.

As the genuine collector's passion is, however, greater than reason, they attended the elabo-rate sales all the same and occasionally paid the 20 percent to 40 percent extra that was considered normal at such auctions.

In the past two years, things have changed drastically. At all really big, well-advertised sales, buyers often pay as much as two or three times, in some cases even more, than they would pay to a dealer selling in his gallery.

Two sales this week showed to what extremes this will lead. The most significant example was the sale of the Ellesmere collection of drawings by the three Caracci brothers and other Bologness masters sold at Sotheby's Tuesday. The collection had all that takes to impress an outsider, who doesn't know who the Carracis were.

The works were part of the Earl of Ellesmere's collection. Even more important, they had been collected by Sir Thomas Lawrence, the British painter of the Georgian period. The drawings offered in the sale had been exhibited in 1836 at Samuel Woodburn's gallery, together with another 60 or so drawings which were given to the Ashmolean Museum when the Earl of Ellesmere bought the whole lot. This was a glamorizer too,

Exhibition

All these trumps, however, had to be played and Sotheby's did a very neat job. It produced a beautiful catalogue (which sold for £3) and skillfully created public interest. The first couo de maitre was the exhibition of the collection at the Kunsthalle in Hamburg from June 9-25. For three weeks, connoisseurs and others could see the wonderful drawings in an important exhibition hall and leave with the feeling that in three weeks' time they might walk away from the London auction house with drawings that bad just been taken down from an Old World museum. Indeed, quite a few of the drawings were worthy of a museum. But the added giamour was of incalculable value to the sale: virtually every one of the drawings fetched at least twice, and often four or five times, Sotheby's experts' estimates. which were very optimistic in themselves.

sold at Christie's in London for £257,000 on July 7.

attributed to Annibale Caracci a study in oil of a boy with his head thrown back and holding a decanter in his right hand and drinking from a glass (61 by 44 centimeters -had been estimated at £8-12,000. It made £40,000, a fantastic price for a picture albeit very pretty but unsigned and of which there is a variant composition on the same scale at Christ Church, Oxford, Lot 46, a sketch in black ink and gray wash (32 by 23 centimeters!, was a charming ond unimportant study of a domestic scene "made up at the top," (with a missing portion replaced at the top of the sketch as the catalogue bonestly pointed out. It rose to £25,000, five times the estimate of £4-6,000, which, in my view, was just about right. It would be difficult to sell such a drawing at £2,000 in a gallery, a dealer said.

The role French film actor Alain Delon played at the sale should not be underestimated. He is said to have bought several lots; several years ago, be paid a record price for a Direr drawing. The Berlin Kupferstichkabinett and the British Museum are also thought to have made acquisitions through agents—no official release of the names of buyers has been

In such circumstances, the in-may want specific works for specific reasons, raises prices. Museum bids will go up to a high limit if its directore have agreed they have to have a work, for commerical considerations weigh little with them. The other striking example of what a big, well-advertised sale does to prices occurred at Christie's sale of uld masters a week ago today. A good catalogue and newspaper stories again focused attention on the auction.

The object that fetched the highest price was an Italian polyptych, dated 1344. Like the Caracci drawings, it had belonged to a great collection— the Tuscan grand ducal collection—in the early 19th century and had been acquired through a famous dealer, Böhm of Vienna, in 1846, by one of the greatest collecting families of the Austrian empire. At the time of the auction, it was still the property of a direct descendant, Rudolf Graf Czernin. Like the drawings, it had been the subject of articles and had been illustrated in scholarly books. For a long time it was on view in a museum, the Zurich Kunsthaus.

No wonder, then, that in spite of various attirbutions (from the 'Paduan School" to "Romagnol" and finally Guariento di Arpo), its estimate ranged between f150,000 and £300,000. On July 7, it fetched more—£257,000.

One should never, of course, generalize about the art market, At the same sale, good, well-known pictures fetched prices that were high but still within the expected limits. A good example was the very fine panel of a Crucifixion ascribed to the Franconian School and datable circa 1475. It was knocked down at £28,250, understandable for a high-quality, early German work.

But on the whole, I think that the auction market tends more and more to divide itself into two categories: that of the usual auction, where prices are closely related to current trends on the dealers' market, and that of the super-auction, where prices are erratically higher.

The situation has its satisfactory side for auctioneers, such as the David-Weill sales for the Ader-Picard team in Paris, the Ellesmere auction at Sotheby's in London or the recent old and modern master sales at Christie's in London. But it also has its dangers: a disruption of the market as a market with established standards, which could lead

For Frequent Parity Moves

Minister Offers Plan For Monetary Reform

BRUSSELS, July 14 (APDJ).

Beigian Finance Minister André
Vierick said today that more frequent parity changes should become a feature of a reformed Take With REC Set TORYO, July 24 (Henters).— Japan will hold trade talks with international monetary system.

Presenting the Belgian view of monetary reform on the eve of next week's meeting of Common Market finance ministers in London on the subject, Mr. Vierick said the present system of fixed parities "has sometimes been confused with a system of malterable parities."

Countries should not hesitate to change their parities when a fundamental disequilibrium appears, he said. The more frequent parity changes would be smaller than in the past.

Active IMF Role The International Monetary Fund (IMF), he said, should play a more active role in this matter. Criteria should be established to judge whether a country's parity is compatible with its balance of payments, and what should be the respective roles of devaluations and revaluations in eliminating disequilibriums between pairs of currencies. Mr. Vierick's ideas appear to coincide with those of many European monetary officials. Mr. Vlerick said a reform of the international monetary system should contain three "indispensable elements": It should not be based on any individual nation's currency; there should be greater flexibility but still fixed exchange rates; and there should be a link between the creation of new special drawing rights (SDRs) and aid to develop-Back to Convertibility

He said eliminating the dollar's key role would require a return to convertibility for dollars newly acquired by central banks and at least a partial consolidation of the banks' current holdings

SDRs would replace the dollar as the means of creating new international liquidity. Gold would continue to play a role, though not a central one. The dollar's parity should be able to be changed, like any other currency's More frequent parity changes could bring a measure He also said Belgium opposes jointly floating EEC currencies to combat speculation. This is a shift, for Belgium had proposed such a joint float last month,

COST OF CHANGE-Those bottom two lines show how the value of Eurobonds denominated in dollars (long-term debt thatched line; medium-term debt broken line) have fared against those in other currencies due to exchange rate fluctuations. Kredietbank Luxembourgeoise has converted its indices for the seven types of Eurobonds into Luxembourg francs (a neutral standard which has fared better than the dollar but not as well as the DM) with end-1970 as the base of 100. The evolution from that date reflects the fluctuation of the bond prices as quoted in its own currency and then converted into Luxembourg francs. (UC equals Units of Account; E, European Currency Units; DM, deutsche marks; FF, French francs and Flux equals Luxembourg francs.)

LUXEMBOURG, July 14 (Reuters).—The Common Market's court of justice, in a precedentsetting judgment, today upheld fines imposed by the EEC commission on nine companies for running a dyestuff price-fixing

The case is unique because it involved the first anti-trust action by the commission against firms based outside EEC territory as well as inside the community. The nine, who were fined a total of 490,000 Units of Account (undevalued dollars), are: Badische Anilin-und Soda-Fabrik, Cassella Farbwerke Mainkur, Payer, and Farbwerke Hoechst. all of West Germany; the French company Sté. The fines were imposed in 1969 and today's judgment follows an appeal by the firms involved. In a one-line judgment the court ruled: "The appeal is retected and the appealing party must bear the costs of the pro-

The case was widely considered as a test case to see whether the court would uphold the commission's action against companies with their headquarters outside the community.

The court has already backed the commission in its first major anti-trust fines imposed on quinine manufacturers, but in that instance only KEC firms were involved.

All the companies were fined 50,000 Units of Accounts (about $55,000) except for ACNA, which was fined 40,000 UA since it did not participate in all the pricefixing arrangements.

Ciba and Geigy were ordered to pay 50,000 UA each since the TOKYO, July 14 (Reuters)-Japan's balance of payments sur-plus rose to $230 million in June from $22 million in May, but fell from last June's $684-million surplus, the Finance Ministry said today.

The ministry said imports fell sharply to $1.37 billion from $1.56 billion in May due to the effects of the seamen's strike. Exports rose to $2.16 billion from $2.07 billion, giving an increased trade surplus of $790 million, the largest in the past three months. The

Good Earnings Reports Boost Wall St. Prices

By Vartania G. Vartan Boise Cascade, falling 1 5/8 to

NEW YORK, July 14 (NYT) .--The stock market finally scored its first gain of the week today, helped in part by the improved profits of several computer manufacturers and by a modest rally in the recently buffeted airlines and some glamour issues on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 5.27 to 922,26. Its net decline for the week, however, came to 15.80.

Reporting higher quarterly earnings were International Business Machines, up 1 1/2 to 393 1/4, Burroughs, up 4 3/8 to 187 3/8, and Honeywell, up 1 3/4 to 151 1/4. Earlier in the session, IBM sold as high as 401.

Further underscoring the market's ebbing strength during the afternoon was the action of Curtiss-Wright, which currently is watched closely for a clue to the general tone of stock prices.

Curtiss-Wright Up Curtiss-Wright, ranking No. 2 in volume, rose 1.4 to 42 after trading as high as 45 1/4. The class "a" shares rose 4 1/4 to 53 1/2.

Fed Offsets Flow of Funds

By H. Erich Heinemann NEW YORK, July 14 (NYT).— The Federal Reserve System sold a massive amount of securities during the week ended Wednesday-in large part to offset a temporary, seasonal flow of funds into the money market.

The bulk of this operation came in the form of more than $2.4 billion of matched sale-purchase agreements on Treasury bills 150called "reverse repos"), which have the effect of taking funds out of the market for very short periods of time.

Market analysts said that these actions were consistent with the gradual tightening of Fed policy in the last three months.

This tightening has shown up most importantly in a steady slowing of the rate of expansion of the principal monetary aggregates, which measure varying aspects of the availability of funds in the economy. The money supply, for example, expanded at a 5 percent at 136.79. annual rate in the last three months, down considerably from

(after restling the CFA Report:) for solid reasons - you might decide to incorporate in Switzerland The well established economy of Switzerland and its encient and well defined body at laws does not offer romantic or exotic attractions. Its tax level can, however, be considered moderate by modern standards and is designed to provide a solid structure, giving legitimate financial incentive to growth - personal and corporate, income and capital. Low taxes are only one of the incentives offered by Switzerland's etable economy • its stable political and economic climate and its conservative business tradition make it a reliable home for the preservative. vation of capital and for the employment of capital in the industrial endeavors of other countries, and in real estate, bond, equity and precious metal markets, and the like . Your interests may best be served by incorporating in Switzerland for the custody or exploitation of any type of asset, fortune or form of endeavor, for the purpose of expending into the Common Market, or for the general conduct of multi-national trade . Many thousands who have discovered this have already established their enterprises in what has become the favorita canton of Zun - only 18 miles from the city of Zurich - where the Corporate Fiduciary AG is in the business of serving you on a personal or corporate basis in the pursuit of objects mentioned above. Meli coupon for our Report -Switzerland as your corporate base-, without any obligations. CORPORATE FIOUCIARY AG 6300 Zug. Switzerland Tel 042-217034 Telex 78944

SPRING SNOW

By Yukio Mishime. Translated from the Japonese by Mich Gallagher. Enopf. 389 pp. 47.95,

Reviewed by Thomas Lask

IT is only natural for a reader of this novel, the first installment in a tetralogy to be called "The Sea of Fertility," to search for those hints that might prefigure the spectacular suicide its author, who completed the four books just before going to his death in November, 1978. After leading a raid on the headquarters of Japan's Self-Defense Forces and haranguing a group of soldiers, Mishima slashed at his bowels and had his head cut off by a colleague. To a Westerner, however, on whom the subtieties of Japanese expression and symbol are lost, "Spring Snow" appears to be free of morbidity and heroic posturing.

"Spring Snow"—its bittersweek title is an index to its contents and a summary of its mood-is a conventional tale of young love, passionate in extreme, blind to consequences, wasteful of years and beauty. It is a love story whose consummation breeds its own destruction. It is an indication of Mishima's skill as a nove!ist that he was able to complete such a work, and so moringly, a work others might easily finch from. It is written with the complete involvement of the author, without a touch of condescension or cynicism.

It is done with such conviction that the reader shares the costasy of its young couple and experiences a sense of poignant loss at the end. It is a novel not free of sentimentality, a necessary ingredient in such a romantic chronicle. But it is an ingredient so carefully used that it adds to the final effect.

Nevertheless, "Spring Snow" differs from the other novels of Mishima's I have read. There is a difference in scale, for one thing. The other novels have a tant, spare compactness: the story lines are severely controlled. Even the architecture of the current book is different. In the earlier books, the happerings ere marshaled like storm clouds; the tension builds up until it becomes too great to be contained and then with one shattering thunderclap the air is cleared. "Spring Snow" is more relaxed; the pace is slower! the story peaks in classic Western manner in the sweep to its destined end.

There is also a loss of poetic. touch. One of Mishima's characteristics is his ability to render the greatest amount of sensual feeling with the alightest details: The arrested attitude of a woman's body, the slope of her shoulders, the sound of an unraveling obi. He had the painter's gift: an absolutely sure eye that always drew the essential and most expressive line—an ability given only to writers of the first rank In "Spring Snow," the line is thicker, the shading less subtle. He is more explicit though not less imaginative.

He has retained the art of creating memorable women. No one is likely to forget the earthy, forthright, unsophisticated but

NBA Approves Sale of Celtics But Not of Bulls

NEW YORK, July 14 (UPI).— The National Basketball Association Board of Governors have approved the sale of the Boston Celties to businessman Robert Schmertz for $5.2 million, but turned down a request for change of ownership by the Chicago Bulls.

The 17-member board voted unanimously to allow Schmertz to purchase the Celtics from Investors Fund Inc., which had obtained the team in a receivership last year.

Schmertz a real estate in-vestor from Lakewood N.J. said he planned to keep the team in Boston and that Red Auerbach would remain as general manager. But the board of governors voted not to allow a group of businessmen from Milwaukee and Chicago to buy the Bulls.

NFL Owners Move, Franchises Stay Put

Colts, Rams in Unprecedented Swap

By William N. Wallace

NEW YORK, July 14 (NYT) .--The ownerships of the Baltimore and Los Angeles franchises of the National Football League wera traded yesterday in a deal that had no precedent in major professional team sports. The players and coaches were not affected and their affiliations will remain the same, but the exchange permitted Carroll Rosenbloom, the longtime owner of the Colts, to leave Beltimore and also to save $4.4 million in capital gains taxes.

The arrangement was made in two parts. First, Robert J. Irsay, a 49-year-old Chicago businessman and an admirer of John Unitas, the Colts' quarterback, bought up the stock of the Rams which cost him $19 million. The largest stock block was sold by the estate of Daniel R. Reeves, who was the club president for 30 years until his death in April, Irsay then swapped the Ram franchise for the Colts in a nocash exchange with Rosenbloom. The 85-year-old chairman of the Colts had been searching for a way to get out of Baltimore for

He felt the achievements of the Colts, the Super Bowl champions of 1971, were not fully appreciated by the fans, especially when it came to preseason games. Three such games there last summer averaged only 18,000 in atten-

Stung by Criticism

Rosenbloom was stung by press criticism, especially from John Steadman, the sports editor of the News-American. He feuded with the city over Municipal Stadium, whose facilities he once describ-ed as "filthy," and with Jerold Hoffberger, whose Orioles, the baseball team, are the prime tenants in the stadium.

Rosenbloom was ready to move the Colts into a new stadium planned for Columbia, Md., or even to Tampa, Fla. But reaction was so strong against him, from commissioner Pete Rozelle and NFL team owners among others, that he turned instead to Los Angeles where the Reeves's executors had out a for-sale sign.

Irsay yesterday promised that the Colts would definitely remain in Baltimore and that he would cooperate with the city in plans for a new stadium.

No Capital Gains Tax

Financial advantage, a customary element in a Rosenbloom husiness transaction, was there in the lack of a capital gains tax. In exchanges of property, such as these common among hatel chains, with no cash involved there can be no tax. Furthermore, each team will be permitted to start up a new schedule of depreciation of players, the leading assets of the Colts and Rams.

Rosenbloom said, "I am a 100 percent owner of the Rams. That's the only way I operate. I didn't have any cash in the transaction. It was simply a trade." He said that Rozelle late Wednesday had informed him that the other NFL owners had given their required approval, which completed a deal initially agreed upon last

In the 1970 NFL realignment the Colts moved from the National Conference to the American, along with Cleveland and Pittsburgh. Each was promised $3 million in indemnity fees and the $1.8 million still coming to the Colto will be an asset of Irsay's.

The $19 million is the largest amount ever paid for any professional sports team, exceeding the high of $16 million paid by Leonard Tose of the Philadelphia Eagles of the NFL in 1989.

quarters in suburban Skokie, Ill., came into pro football with a partner, Willard H. (Bud) Keland of Racine, Wis., a former chairman of the executive committee of the Miami Dolphins. Irsay is to own 51 percent, Keland 49, in conforming to the

and beating business bas head-

NFL policy which requires that in franchise transactions one of the new owners has control. But at a press conference in Baltimore yesterday, Irsay said Keland has not yet assumed his obligations. "I don't know why be won't produce," said Irsay. "If he doesn't I'll provide the necessary capital."

Joe Thomas, a former Dolphin personnel director, is to be than new general manager of the Colts, succeeding Don Klosterman. Klosterman went to Los Angeles, his home city, with Rosenbloom.

Lolich Is 1st To Win 15; RoyalsBow Idle Orioles Fall

21 Behind Tigers NEW YORK, July 14 (UPI).-Mickey Lolich became the first 15-game winner in the major leagues by scattering 11 hits last night as the Detroit Tigers erupt-ed for five first-inning runs in a 6-4 bome victory over the Kansas City Royals. Lolich has six defents.

Detroit, which sent 10 men to plate in the first inning, recorded its longest winning streak of the season at five games. The victory increased the Tigers' lead in the American League Eastern Division to 2 1/2 games over the idie Baltimore Orioles.

Ed Brinkman singled home two runs in the first inning to drive out Paul Splittorff, who suffered his flith loss against nine victories. Brinkman also executed a suicide squeeze in the third inning after Ike Brown doubled and stole third. Willie Horton drove in a run in the first inning with a single which caromed off Splittorff's right shoulder, Norm Cash drove one in with a sacrifice fly and the other run of the inning was wild-pitched home by Splittorff, who had a personal five-game winning streak broken.

Twins 10, Red Sox 0 Ray Corbin blanked Boston on a six-hitter and Rich Reese blasted a three-run home run and Eric Soderholm a two-run shot, leading Minnesota to a 10-0 home victory.

Rangers 5, Indians 6 Texas jumped on Milt Wilcox for four runs in the first inning, two of which came in on a wind-blown double by Hal King, and pitcher Rich Hand shut out Cleveland, 5-0, at Arlington,

Reds 2. Pirates 0 In the National League, Cesar Geronimo rapped out three hits. one his third homer of the season, and Gary Nolan and Clay Carroll of Cincinnati combined to blank Pittsburgh, 2-0, and complete a sweep of the three-gams series et Cincinnati. The victory was the 13th of the season against two losses for Nolan who struck out seven and walked one before bowing out for a pinchlitter after eight innings. Geronimo's homer broke a scoreless tie in the fifth inning and tagged Steve Bless with his third loss against 10 victories. The Reds stayed 1 1 2 games ahead of Houston, which also won, in the Western Division, while idle New York moved to within three games

Cardinals 2. Braves 0 At St. Louis. Reggie Cleveland tossed a two-hitter for his 11th victory, his seventh in a row, as he blanked Atlanta, 2-0, for the Cardinals. Cleveland faced only 29 batters, two over the mini-ed, the Democrats would still be here, and a new floor fight would be started to find who legally had a right to the seats. As a matter of fact, while the Democratic convention battles raged on the floor, a group of Republican and Democratic officials met behind the podium to see if they could work out a compromise on the seating, so that the Republicans could hold their convention as scheduled, and the Democrats could continue their debates on women's rights and

U.S. Government Re-Establishes

Art Commissions

WASHINGTON, July 14 (WP). -After a six-year interruption. the U.S. government is re-instituting its policy of spending I 1/2 percent of construction costs on art when incorporated in the architectural design of federal buildings.

Arthur P. Sampson, acting bead of the General Services Administration, made the announcement vesterday.

Government funds were allotted for art during the Depression years. But, from then until 1966. little money was spent on embellishing federal buildings. The 1 1/2 percent policy first went into effect in 1963, but was dropped in 1966 as an economy messure. It was now being reactivated.

been worse. As Tuesday couldn't adjourn their convention until the platform had been accented. Republican chairman Robert Dole pointed out that the bylaws of the Republican party read that the Republicans had to have their own convention and could not share it with another political party.

Democratic Chairman Lawrence O'Brien said that if his convention continued through Aug. 21, and at the moment it looked like it would, he would insist the Democrats stay where they were and not give up their seats. "We were here first," O'Brien said. "Besides, if you had gone to San Diego, like you should have, you wouldn't have this problem."

Dole said. Any party that starts a convention on July 10 and can't finish it by Aug. 21 doesn't deserve to run a pres-Idential candidate

O'Brien replied that he would gladly put to a vote of the Democratic convention whether they wanted to shars their seats with the Republicans.

Dole insisted that the Republicans be allowed to vote on the issue as well.

O'Brien said that since they had not been seated, they had no legal right to vote.

The mayor of Miami Beach. who wasn't sure he could handle two conventions at one time, suggested a compromise: the Republicans would be seated at the Democratic convention and would conduct their business while the Democrats were calling the roll. Since it takes two hours for the Democratic state delegations to poll their people on each issue, the Republicans would have plenty of time to nominate President Nixon.

O'Brien agreed but Dole flatly turned down the proposal and said he didn't want his clean-cut Republican delegates to be seen on television with people with long hair and blue jeans.

. Fortunately, by seven o'clock in the morning, the Democratic party finally adopted its platform, and the question of the Democrats and Republicans sharing the convention center became academic.

But it was close, much closer than anybody will admit. Even when President Nixon thinks about it he has night-

Mr. Protestant Work Ethic -Evangelist Reverend Ike

By Henry Allen

NEW YORK (WP).—There have been lots of black evangelists in America with the spotlights booming off their pinky rings, and the mansions and the Cadillacs-Sweet Daddy Grace, Father Divine, Prophet Jones but Reverend Ike may be the first to dump the old heaven and hell whipsaw and make cash the main article of faith, with a little healing on

Reverend Ike—the Rev. Frederick J. Eikerenkoetter II—is the 37-year-old, coffee-colored, creamy-voiced, buttered-hair or of the United Church and Science of Living Institute. and a radio preacher on about 70 stations. Next to Billy Graham, he is the higgest evangelism draw in America, he

He's a rich man and a minister, every mother's impossible dream of a son, it would seem, which may account for the kind of crowd he draws-at his home church, for instance, in a former New York movie theater, on a Sunday aternoon. They are women, mostly, great matronly bulwarks who somehow manage to look as if they are wearing five or six layers of clothing, topped by glorious silk and chiffon sundaes "He talks sense, you can't deny it," says Rose Pettet, who comes over from Brooklyn "every time Reverend Ike is here."

There is Reverend Ike, with nothing but good news up on that stage, plus two organs, choir, ballerina, three assistant ministers, and a frosting of gold candelabra, urns and two Good news and the Blessing Plan. The women carry their

Blessing Plan envelopes in their white-gloved hands as if they were tickets of admission. "As you work with the Blessing Plan, make definite plans to prosper," says Reverend Ike's Action! magazine, which is filled with advice, advertisements and testimony about the Blessing Plan. "When I first started writing Reverend Ike, I didn't have anything. Now, since working with Reverend Ike's Blessing an I make from $1,800 to $2,000 a week. I have two tractortrailers... our own home... a brand new fine car... I don't drink anymore," says William Hunt, testifying at-a meeting in Orlando, Nov. 21, 1971, as reported by Action! The Blessing Flan is as easy as no money down, and as long as you want to pay, you simply send Reverend Ike a minimum of $10 a month, in return for which you may get not only Lincoln Continentals, diamonds, "unexpected checks," and healing, but Reverend Ike's prayers and a swatch of red prayer cloth, too.

"Even if I knew how much money was coming in I wouldn't tell you," Ike tells a reporter. But he claimed last October to have a "monthly correspondence" with 1.045,846

"I am maintained in style," he says, but he won't say how and the second s

high or where, "to protect my life and my little 8-year-old son."

"Oh, Lord, there he is," marvels a woman. . There he is, sweet Reverend Ike, in his Harvey Krans of Hollywood cardinal-scarlet belihottom suit with American flag necktie on a yellow, tailored shirt; pomaded hair over hairline moustache, none of this dashiki business for Reverend Ike, no Afro comb sticking out of his back pocket ("Don't give me black power, I can't buy anything with it"); three crusty nougats of diamond rings, the footlights slithering on his red patent leather boots, and that dream of a smile.

It's a long way from the juke joint in Ridgeland, S. C., where he started preaching at 14 when the owner got the spirit from a bunch of traveling Pentecostalists and turned

"I don't intend to say what people have always been saying in church. Because that's worn out! That ain't hittin' on a thing! Say it after me: Mind power is God power. Mind power is success power. Mind power is moneygetting power!

"C'mon, get that money-getting feeling!" Ike is Mr. Protestant Work Ethic, Mr. American Pie, maybe the last man left in this country to preach Horatio Alger economics, success by hard work and/or windfall. It is as if Dale Carnegie or Norman Vincent Peale or Barry Goldwater were doing their smile, hope and free enterprise routines to a heavy gospel shuffle. The services are like that old time religion without the religion.

After two hours of testifying, signifying, singing and sermonizing, the magic moment comes: the collection I like money and I make no bones about it-money is nderful stuff. I want everybody who's going to give me $100 or more to come down here, everybody with $100 or more. I'll wait while you come down from the balcony, everybody with $100 or $50 or more come down here to the stage, everybody with..."

"Green power! The rest of you give me $3-it's worth $2 just to look at me, just to get magnetized for money." Then he walks off. It's an oddly mournful moment, as when the last television program goes off the air . While the ushers, who are dressed in nurses' uniforms, reap the offering in white plastic scrub buckets, Reverend wanders back on stage to a scarlet throne and eases into it, flaring a black cape with yellow silk lining, looking like a cross between a butterfly and a bat as he floats a heavylidded stare across the crowd for minntes on end, a smile eddying on his face, and for the first time you sense the vast, silky power of the man.

PEOPLE:

It was one of those sibling graps between Olive McGovern, then a girl of about 10, and her younger brother, George. "It reached the point where I wanted to say the most insulting thing I could say to him," she recalled. "So I told him if he ever ran for President and needed one more vote to win, I would not vote for him." But Olive, now Mrs. Philip Briles of Sisseton, S.D., who told the story while in Mismi Beach for the Democratic National Convention, says she now is ready to abandon the threat. Younger brother George is now the Democratic nominee for President.

And speaking of McGovern, this has to do with his in-laws. It happened at least two or three dozen times during the Democratic party convention; People stopped Ila Pennington on the street, shook her hand in elevators --- one newspaper photographer snapped away for 15 minutes before she pointed out his

"I just have to keep telling people I am not Eleaner McGovern," she said.

But the confusion is real because Mrs. Pennington is Mrs. McGovern's identical twin.

"This mixup is fairly new," said Mrs. Pennington, who left a Dursing job last October to run the national volunteer McGovern headquarters in Washington. I think it is happening now be-cause people are becoming aware of what Eleanor looks like. Her face is getting national atten-
